Presentation Abstract 演講內容簡介

Smartphones are part of our daily lives nowadays but the battery life hasn't kept up with the increased smartphone capabilities. Wireless charging is set to change this. You could simply charge your phone wherever you go, forget about USB cables, chargers and, adapters. Imagine sitting down for a cup of coffee, and placing your phone on the table, and it starts to charge automatically.

Wireless charging is set to be applied in products ranging from mobile phones to home appliances, therefore a need to ensure charging is standardized is required. This is why the Wireless Power Consortium developed qi (pronounced "chee") – the standard for interoperable wireless charging. With qi, your devices can be charged wirelessly, no matter where you go, what brand you are using.
